In the early days of the Municipal Civil Service Board of Examiners, two of the profound questions which were put to applicants for positions as policemen were:

"How many streets below Fourteenth street run from river to river?" and "How many streets in the city have names composed of three letters?"

"HOT HASH FOR CONVICTS NOW.

many streets in the city have names composed of three letters?"

The answer to the first naturally remains to-day, as it always was: "Three—Thirteenth, Tenth and Fulton." But the man who would answer the second question to day as he would have done in the period referred to would not be nearly right. At one time there were just seven streets with names of three letters, viz.: Ann, Dey, Elm, Gay, Jay, New and Oak, but during the last fifteen years, in the laying out of the town in the annexed district the number has been doubled by the addition of these: Ash, Ely, Fir. Fox. Hoe, Kip, Poe and Rae, making fifteen in all.

Commissioner Burtis Ate Brooklyn Prison Fare and Found it Cold.

Charities Commissioner John H. Burtis, de Brooklyn, is out against cold hash for convicts. He visited the Penitentiary a few days ago, and being hungry he said he would try prison food, which Warden Hayes assured him was "very fillin'" and substantial. He was served with hash, but it was cold.

Before leaving Mr. Burtis Issued an order that hash should be served hot during the Winter season.
